

Postmodern Architecture (and Globalization)

#1

#2

#3

#4

#5

#6

#7

#8

Dubai: _____
Los Angeles, CA: _____
Las Vegas, NV: _____
London, England: _____
Memphis, TN: _____
New York City: _____
Pittsburgh, PA: _____
Singapore: _____

When you walk in a postmodern city, you can easily become disoriented. There are often no landmarks, only reflective surfaces. There are no authentic neighborhoods. More and more, financial centers—and even apartment buildings—in the world's cities resemble one another. One cannot 'memorize' the postmodern city, only navigate its disorienting surfaces. (Based on ideas from Fredric Jameson, Postmodernism, or, The Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism, 1991).